Sarah Wiener has gathered together 12 youngsters from all over Europe, aged 12 to 14, to pass on her passion for cooking and food. Sarah's objective is to teach her young recruits how to eat more healthily and how to have fun cooking!

The series portrays the daily experiences of the boys and girls at the neighbouring farms in the vegetable patch, at the market and in the kitchen. The vegetable patch and orchard will supply the fruit and vegetables, as long as they are tented to, sown, planted, weeded and watered before they're harvested. The inhabitants of the kitchen run, the rabbit hutch and the pigsty also require constant care. Initially, none of the kitchen kids on the gastronomic holiday camp know how to cook. So Sarah is going to first show them some simple recipes, before they can move onto more sophisticated dishes. The setting for their adventure is an old country house in the Var region, in Provence, Southeast France.

Spaghetti in tomato sauce.

Once the 12 kitchen kids have become acquainted with their surroundings, Sarah Wiener invites them into a new world - the kingdom of cookery. She starts off with a firm favourite - spaghetti in tomato sauce. But how exactly should professional kitchen knives be used? André appears to have cracked it, but Alice cuts her finger.

A full breakfast - muesli and boiled oats and artichokes in rouille, Sarah Wiener-style.

Sarah explains what the ideal breakfast is and suggests the youngsters get interested in eggs. A local farmer's wife teaches them the secrets of successful poultry, rabbits and pig breeding. Because the kids now have to look after all the animals on the property.

Picnic clafoutis and sandwiches. Tomato salad with brousse cheese.

Sarah has suggested a picnic, which will consist of a potato salad and some delicious sandwiches - just the thing after a dip in the river. The next day, it's off to a goat breeder. The kids will attempt to milk the goats, a task that doesn't turn out to be that easy. Then they learn how to make "brousse", a delicious goat cheese that will go with the tomato starter

Breaded Viennese escalope. Apple fritters.

The day starts with a visit to an organic baker, where the kids learn how to knead dough that's so heavy it's hard to lift, and how to shape it into nice loaves, then pop it in the oven. Back at the ranch, they learn how to make Viennese escalopes. It's a busy evening as the pigs have gone off exploring.

It's pizza day! The basic recipe is Pizza Konfetti and Rocket and Ham Pizza. And Fish "en papillote".

A trip to the market to learn how to buy good produce is an essential part of Sarah's program. She shows the kids how to recognise fresh fruit and veg, and how to inspect the quality of meat and fish. Then it's time to make pizzas with healthy ingredients. In the evening, the kids go fishing - their catch will be part of tomorrow's menu.

Apricot Tarte Tatin. Provençale Rabbit.

Sarah wants to cook rabbit, which is highly rated in France, but that's not necessarily the case in Germany. Sarah reckons that people who eat meat should have the courage to see animals being killed and so the most courageous kitchen kids witness a few rabbits being slaughtered. To make matters worse - that's exactly the day the kids' rabbit-mascot falls ill.

Chocolat Cake.

After four weeks of hard work, it's time Sarah had a rest, and so the future cooks' mission is to take charge of the menu themselves. It's their turn to decide on the recipes and make them. It's almost like an end-of-studies exam. The kids do, however, have the right to ask Sarah three "joker" questions to help them with their cooking.
